

The Library of Fragrance <http://www.libraryoffragrance.ch/en-us/> is a company which makes 250 different fragrances based on experiences and memories, so their products are intended to make the wearer smile by being reminded of special events, childhood, long-ago experiences. The company suggests mixing and matching different scents to create a unique mingling of memory experiences. Perhaps you could mix rain, baby powder and shortbread to recall a day staying in with your child, or leather, glue and crayon to remember art class in junior school on a Friday afternoon. Frozen Margarita, melon and honeysuckle might remind you of a special holiday, while holy water, and gin and tonic might be reminiscent for some clergy! Although it might be rather expensive to buy a selection from the Library of Fragrance, it might be interesting to assemble your own collection of items which have inspired some of their scents and see if their choice really does provoke, memories, dreams and spiritual reflections.
